

When Personal Matters Become Market Matters

Financial advisers spend a lot of time helping clients plan for changes in their own lives: a new job, a move abroad, a growing family, retirement. What is much harder to plan for is a change in somebody else's life. Especially when that somebody runs one of the most valuable companies in the world.

Last week, Nvidia's chief executive, Jensen Huang, admitted to an affair in a message to staff, and the board opened an independent investigation. On 12 November, he resigned, with the finance chief stepping in as interim chief executive. Between 2 and 13 November, Nvidia's shares fell 19.4%.

Read the full Market Update here.

This Market Insight was published by TAM Europe Asset Management

This document is not intended in isolation as an offer or solicitation or recommendation to use or invest in any of the services or products mentioned herein. Investors should be aware that the value of the portfolio and the income from it can go down as well as up so you may get back less than you invested. Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future returns. The value of investments denominated in foreign currency may fall as a result of exchange rate movements. The investments and services referred to in this document may not be suitable for all investors and, if in doubt, you should seek qualified independent financial advice. Any opinions, expectations and projections within this note are those of TAM Europe Asset Management, represent only one possible outcome and do not constitute investment advice.

TAM Europe Asset Management A.V., S.A. is authorised and regulated by the Comision Nacional del Mercado de Valores (CNMV), No. 295. Registered office: Avenida Locutor Vicente Hipólito, 39, 03540, Alicante, Spain.